

The Comparative, International & Development Education Centre (CIDEDEC) is pleased to present

CIDE SEMINAR

All You Need To Know About Applying For And Attending Conferences

Vandra Masemann & Kara Janigan

Vandra Masemann is an anthropologist who has worked in the fields of comparative education, multicultural and anti-racist education, and international and global education. Her Ph.D. thesis was an ethnography of a girls' boarding school in West Africa, and she has devoted a considerable portion of her career to advocating the uses of ethnographic and other qualitative methods in research in comparative education. She has taught at the Faculty of Education, University of Toronto, the University of Wisconsin-Madison, the University of Pittsburgh, the State University of New York at Buffalo, and the Florida State University, and is presently Adjunct Associate Professor at the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education at the University of Toronto. She was President of the World Council of Comparative Education Societies (1987-1991) and its Secretary General (1996-2000), the Comparative and International Education Society (1990-1991), and the Comparative and International Education Society of Canada (1985-1987).

Kara Janigan is an international education consultant, an Adjunct Professor at the Middlebury Institute of International Affairs at Monterey, and a Visiting Scholar at OISE. She holds a Ph.D. in Comparative, International, and Development Education from the University of Toronto and a B. Ed. from the University of Ottawa. Her doctoral research focused on the experiences of rural female secondary school students in Tajikistan. Kara has specialized in issues of gender and education as a teacher, teacher educator, curriculum developer, and researcher for organizations such as American Institute for Research, Asian Development Bank, Save the Children, UNESCO, and UN Women, etc. She has worked as a gender specialist for education projects in Southeast Asia, and sub-Saharan Africa for organizations such as CARE, UNICEF, and USAID. Kara has written five book chapters on issues of gender and education.

Conferences are an indispensable part of every CIDE student's professional development. This seminar will give an introduction to students who may never have thought about attending professional conferences before. It will also provide encouragement for those who want to improve their abstracts and presentations. Through every phase of the process – submission of the abstract, preparing the paper, negotiating the networking, travelling to the conference, presenting the paper, and dealing with unexpected eventualities - you will be prepared.
