

Lydia Boyko

Lydia is a Professor in the School of Media Studies and Information Technology, at Humber College Institute of Technology and Advanced Learning, Toronto, Canada. She has taught at the college level for close to 10 years and has more than 20 years of private sector management experience with a focus on public affairs and communications in a wide range of business sectors, including telecommunications and financial services. Lydia holds a Bachelor of Journalism (First Class Honours) from Carleton University and a Business Communications Certificate from McGill University. She completed a Master of Education and a Ph.D. at the University of Toronto, specializing in Theory and Policy Studies in Higher Education, involving research in teaching and learning in addition to management-related inquiry. Her Doctoral thesis, examining academic department chairs in Canadian universities, earned the 2010 George L. Geis Dissertation Award from the Canadian Society for the Study of Higher Education. She is a Fellow of the Life Management Institute in the insurance industry and an Accredited Public Relations (APR) professional.

Email: lmboyko@sympatico.ca