

We asked LHAE DSA: What is your favourite course at OISE? Why?

Susan He

LHA1848 - Innovative Curricula in HE and the Professions

Professor Katherine Janzen

This is one of my favorite courses at OISE because the readings, class assignments and course delivery was put together seamlessly. Prof. Janzen utilizes group activities and a selection of readings from the health professions, colleges and universities for students to choose from. The condensed Friday/Saturday course delivery method was effective for this course because there was enough time for groups to find a space around OISE to work together then join the class when it's time to present. On Saturdays we picked up right where we left the conversation the day before.

LHA1142H - Young Adulthood in Crisis: Learning, Transitions and Activism

Professor Lance McCreedy

This is one of my favourite courses at OISE. The class focuses on the experiences of young adults who have had to navigate massive shifts in social policy landscapes across the United States and Canada. The class integrates readings that reflect current events such as colonization, Anti-Black Racism, and housing instability. Professor McCreedy's assignments were flexible and gave the opportunity to participate in academic work outside of essays through a praxis project. When taking the class, we were encouraged to engage in active reflection through weekly assignments and learning from peers through class discussions.

Christina Arayata

LHA1816H - Sociology of Higher Education

Professor Elizabeth Buckner

This is one of my favourite courses at OISE. Applying key sociological theories and concepts to issues of higher education, this course helps build a solid theoretical foundation for our studies. Professor Buckner delivered classes in a very interactive way, and she fostered critical thinking of students through a large amount of both in-class and online discussions. The course readings were very readable. The assignments were designed in a logical and meaningful way, enabling students to get an in-depth understanding of a topic that interests them.
