Associate Teaching as Reciprocal Learning

Every time I am able to work with a Teacher Candidate, the relationship is reciprocal. I am able to reflect on my own practice as an educator, and I am able to learn new and interesting practices in education. A win/win for both of us!

MT Associate Teacher Survey, 2018

Some key messages for Associate Teachers:

1. LESSON PLAN EXPECTATIONS - Teacher Candidates are expected to complete lesson plans for the lessons they are responsible for teaching.

WHY? In order for Teacher Candidates to develop a “habit of mind” as they design and plan lessons for their students, TCs must regularly engage in lesson planning. Having a well-developed lesson plan also demonstrates to an Associate Teacher the careful and thoughtful process behind planning an effective lesson. Writing detailed lesson plans is an important stage on the developmental continuum of learning to teach.

2. QUESTIONS or CONCERNS - Many ATs wonder about when they should contact the Faculty Advisor if they have a question or concern. If you are wondering if you should contact us, that means it is time to contact us. Please contact us at any time, even if it is on the last day of the practicum! Contact the TC’s Faculty Advisor or Practicum Coordinator (contact information on other side).

Mentoring...is a one-to-one relationship between a relatively inexperienced teacher and a relatively experienced teacher...which aims to support the newer teacher’s learning, development and well-being. This definition extends earlier ones by explicitly including support for mentees’ well-being as an integral part of the mentor role.

Support for the well-being of [TCs] is vital because: 1. [TC experiences] can be characterized by intense pressure and disillusionment as they work to enact their plans; 2. As TCs are new learners developing their craft in public, they may generally be regarded as vulnerable; 3. The provision of effective support for [TCs] can offset stress and fatigue, and support their retention in the profession; and 4. Higher levels of well-being are associated with increased teacher effectiveness.

Something new!

TC Self-Report on Teaching and Learning: Working Towards a Collaborative Summative

The "TC Self-Report on Teaching and Learning" form provides TCs with an opportunity to share notes and thoughts about moments of involvement and growth with their Associate Teacher. Associate Teachers are invited to consider and/or draw on the TCs' thoughts as they craft the summative evaluation. The form can be found at the link above.
