Privacy Policy of the Counselling and Psychoeducational Clinic

Privacy of personal information is an important principle to the OISE/UT Counselling and Psychoeducational Clinic. We are committed to collecting, using and disclosing personal information responsibly and only to the extent necessary for the services we provide. We also try to be open and transparent as to how we handle personal information. This document describes our privacy policies.

WHAT IS PERSONAL INFORMATION?
Personal information is information about an identifiable individual. Personal information includes information that relates to: an individual’s personal characteristics (e.g., gender, age, income, home address or phone number, ethnic background, family status); health (e.g., health history, health conditions, health services received by them); or activities and views (e.g., religion, politics, opinions expressed by an individual, an opinion or evaluation of an individual). Personal information is different from business information (e.g., an individual’s business address and telephone number). This is not protected by privacy legislation.

WHO WE ARE
The OISE/UT Counselling and Psychoeducational Clinic, at the time of writing, includes two Co-Directors and one support staff. The Clinic is a learning resource for the professional training of the Counselling psychology students in the Department of Adult Education and Counselling Psychology and of the School and Clinical Child Psychology students of the Department of Human Development and Applied Psychology. In the Clinic, students learn professional skills by working with clients under the supervision of registered psychologists.

WE COLLECT PERSONAL INFORMATION: PRIMARY PURPOSES

About Clients
We collect, use and disclose personal information in order to serve our clients. Typically we collect information for the purposes of assessment and counselling.

For counseling:
We collect information about a client’s history, including family history, social situation and emotional functioning in order to help us assess what their counselling needs are, to advise them of their options and, should they choose, to provide therapy.

For assessment:
Psychological assessment is intended to answer questions about the client’s intellectual, academic, social and/or emotional functioning. This is typically accomplished through standardized and informal testing, interview(s), questionnaire(s), observation, and review of previous records and reports.
A second primary purpose is to obtain a baseline of assessment information so that, in providing ongoing services, we can identify changes that occur over time.

It would be rare for us to collect such information without the client’s written consent.

About Members of the General Public

Members of the general public may contact the Clinic requesting service for themselves or their children. Our intake coordinators gather this information and provide it to the registered faculty and students who are about to begin assessments and/or counselling. Some of these referrals become clinic cases; other referrals are not seen. For those referrals that are not seen, the referral information is destroyed at the end of April of each year.

We Collect Personal Information: Related and Secondary Purposes

Like most organizations, we also collect, use and disclose information for purposes related to or secondary to our primary purposes. The most common examples of our related and secondary purposes are as follows:

- Our Clinic invoices clients for services that were not paid for at the time, or to collect unpaid accounts.
- Our Clinic reviews client and other files for the purpose of ensuring that we provide high quality services, including assessing the performance of our staff. In addition, external consultants (e.g., auditors, lawyers, practice consultants, voluntary accreditation programs) may on our behalf do audits and continuing quality improvement reviews of our Clinic, including reviewing client files and interviewing our staff. All persons involved in these activities are required by law to maintain the confidentiality of any accessed information.
- Psychologists are regulated by the College of Psychologists of Ontario who may inspect our records and interview our staff as a part of their regulatory activities in the public interest. In addition, as professionals, we will report serious misconduct, incompetence or incapacity of other practitioners, whether they belong to other organizations or our own. Also, our organization believes that it should report information suggesting serious illegal behaviour to the authorities. External regulators have their own strict privacy obligations. Sometimes these reports include personal information about our clients, or other individuals, to support the concern (e.g., improper services). Also, like all organizations, various government agencies (e.g., Canada Customs and Revenue Agency, Information and Privacy Commissioner, Human Rights Commission, etc.) have the authority to review our files and interview our staff as a part of their mandates. In these circumstances, we may consult with professionals (e.g., lawyers, accountants) who will investigate the matter and report back to us. All persons involved in these activities are required by law to maintain the confidentiality of any accessed information.
- The cost of some goods/services provided by the organization to clients is paid for by third parties (e.g., OHIP, WSIB, private insurance, Assistive Devices Program). These third-party payers must have the client’s consent or Clients or other individuals with whom we deal may have questions about our services at some point after they have been received. We also provide ongoing services for many of our clients over a period of months or years for which our previous records are helpful. We retain our client information for a minimum of ten years after the last contact (or in the case of children – 10 years after their 18th birthday) to enable us to respond to those questions and provide these services (our regulatory College also requires us to retain our client records).

PROTECTING PERSONAL INFORMATION

We understand the importance of protecting personal information. Records relating to all clinic clients are confidential. In general this means that no information contained in records is provided to a third party without written consent of the client. [There are some specific ethical or legal circumstances when this confidentiality requirement is waved. For example, clinicians shall reveal information when there is a suspicion of child abuse, when clients pose a significant danger to themselves or others, when clients report sexual abuse by a health care professional, or when the court issues a subpoena for records or testimony.]

Staff members are allowed to access only that information for which they have a “need-to-know”. This means that staff members involved in billing, for example, are allowed to access only that information needed to carry out their billing function. They are not allowed to access other information. All personnel are trained in the need for privacy and confidentiality. They are also trained in the Clinic’s privacy policies and procedures, including prevention of record loss and unauthorized access. Personnel who know a client personally are required to declare this and to remove themselves from access to that client’s record unless there is an emergency or unless the client has given express consent for access.

In addition, we take the following precautions when storing or moving client information:

- Paper information is either under supervision or secured in a locked or restricted area.
- Electronic hardware is either under supervision or secured in a locked or restricted area at all times. In addition, passwords are used on computers.
- Paper information is transmitted through sealed, addressed envelopes.
- Electronic information has identifiers removed.
- Staff are trained to collect, use and disclose personal information only as necessary to fulfill their duties and in accordance with our privacy policy and with the ethical requirement of confidentiality.

RETENTION AND DESTRUCTION OF PERSONAL INFORMATION

We need to retain personal information for some time to ensure that we can answer any questions you might have about the services provided and for our own accountability to external regulatory bodies. However, we do not want to keep personal information too long in order to protect your privacy.
We keep our client files for about ten years or, in the case of children, for ten years after they turn 18 year of age.

We destroy paper files containing personal information by shredding. We destroy electronic information by deleting it and, when the hardware is discarded, we ensure that the hard drive is physically destroyed.

YOU CAN LOOK AT YOUR INFORMATION
With only a few exceptions, you have the right to see what personal information we hold about you. Often all you have to do is ask. We can help you identify what records we might have about you. We will also try to help you understand any information you do not understand (e.g., short forms, technical language, etc.). We will need to confirm your identity, if we do not know you, before providing you with this access. We reserve the right to charge a nominal fee for such requests.

If there is a problem we may ask you to put your request in writing. If we cannot give you access, we will tell you within 30 days if at all possible and tell you the reason, as best we can, as to why we cannot give you access.

If you believe there is a mistake in the information, you have the right to ask for it to be corrected. This applies to factual information and not to any professional opinions we may have formed. We may ask you to provide documentation that our files are wrong. Where we agree that we made a mistake, we will make the correction and notify anyone to whom we sent this information. If we do not agree that we have made a mistake, we will still agree to include in our file a brief statement from you on the point and we will forward that statement to anyone else who received the earlier information.

DO YOU HAVE A QUESTION OR CONCERN?
If you have been a clinic client and have questions about your personal information, you may contact one of the two Clinic information officers. Our two information officers are the two Clinic Co-Directors, Dr. Nancy Link (Child and Adolescent Services) and Dr. Judy Silver (Adult Services). They can be reached at:

If you wish to make a formal complaint about our privacy practices, you may make it in writing to one of our Information Officers. She will acknowledge receipt of your complaint, ensure that it is investigated promptly and that you are provided with a formal written decision with reasons.

If you have a concern about the professionalism or competence of our services or the mental or physical capacity of any of our professional staff, we would ask you to discuss those concerns with us. However, if we cannot satisfy your concerns, you are entitled to complain to our regulatory body:
This policy is made under the Personal Information Protection and Electronic Documents Act. This is a complex Act and provides some additional exceptions to the privacy principles that are too detailed to set out here. There are some rare exceptions to the commitments set out above.

For more general inquiries, the Information and Privacy Commissioner of Canada oversees the administration of the privacy legislation in the private sector. The Commissioner also acts as a kind of ombudsperson for privacy disputes. The Information and Privacy Commissioner can be reached at:
